

Music Sale

As we do every other year, we will be holding a sale of new and used music during Music Week.

You or your students and their families may have old music lying around which you can't imagine a use for. But it's really important to keep it in circulation because other teachers, particularly new teachers, can't get enough material for sightreading, sending home with students for the summer, or any other purposes they might dream up.

Every year students go home with armloads of music they have picked up for one or two dollars, or for nothing in some cases.

Anything to do with music will be welcome - from old conservatory books, Grandma's pop songs, books about music to ukuleles - all will be welcome. If we can't sell it or give it away, we'll get rid of it for you.

Start collecting now, and closer to Music Week, you may drop music off at Kay Wilson's. There will be information in the program.
